A SHAMEFUL AFFAIR.

The women of Stromsburg, Nebraska, who decry some alleged erring sisters to the woods, and there, disguised as white caps and ruffians, whipped the miserable creatures unmercifully, disgraced themselves more than they did the women they flogged. It is shameful that women who boast of their own virtue should demean themselves to such lawlessness. They not only violated the law, and thereby set for their sons and daughters a pitiful example, but they failed completely to affect anything in the way of reformation of the evil complained of.

If they had taken out the men who led these creatures to their alleged ruin, and have flogged them, there would be some grains of sympathy due for their cause. But women is ever unkind to her own sex; in fact, relentless. Possibly conscious virtue may become rage when others bring shame upon the sex, but that cannot excuse or palliate the offense of these female white caps. They behave like ruffians and ought to be punished as are other criminals. We cannot find any reason whatever on which to hinge an excuse for them.

One dispatch speaks of these female regulators as composing the Women's Christian Temperance Union. This was a gratuitous slander on the part of the telegraphic reporter. The women of that institution do not deal in whips and thongs. Their mission is one of mercy and loving kindness, and to couple their names with such an outrageously disgraceful scene was unwarranted. The man who sent the slanderous dispatch ought to have known better, and probably is by this time heartily ashamed of his blundering.

Later dispatches repeat the statement that the women were all members of the local W. C. T. U. If this be true, it shows how even noble purposes may be perverted by fanaticism and big try. These women have brought shame upon the institution with which they are connected, and the W. C. T. U. should repudiate them.—Record Union.

There is sound reasoning in the above. A little kind motherly reasoning on the part of the female regulators would have gone much further toward accomplishing the desired result. A chastisement usually brings everything bad and nothing good to the surface in the nature of an erring girl. Instead of putting a stop to wrong doing, the fear of a repetition of the whipping is an incentive to be more secret about it in future. That is the only result.

By the complexion of things in Washington yesterday, it would not be surprising if the proposed amendment should be introduced and voted down; that then a cloture should be called, and the President have his way in regard to the repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman law. There is enough of the Bourbon in him never to forget anything and never to learn anything. He may be made to believe that this proposed compromise, having but eleven months to run, will, in fact, accomplish all he wants, but the possibility is that when that is presented to him he will insist that it is no good, and order the work to be done over again. We are sure he would do this if it were not for the election next month. As it is, no one can be sure of anything he will do except that when he gets an opportunity he will deliver a blow at the West every time.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Twenty thousand copies of Congressman Newland's speech against the repeal bill in the House of Representatives have been sent to the Old Dominion to make votes for the Populist. The election machinery in the State is controlled by the old parties; two Democrats and one Republican, the latter generally an illiterate Negro, comprise the election board in each precinct, and the benefit of silver literature may be counteracted in counting the votes.
